The position of New Orleans, however, is not quite as bad as it appears upon paper. The following quotations from the New Orleans. Times of Friday last, which gives interesting information on some other points, also explains this:

"We remarked in our last report that a portion of the supply consisted of small lots which the holders were anxious to close out, and on which, in order to effect sales, they were willing to make concessions, but that the principal lists could not be bought at the ruling rates. This continues to be the case, and there is such a wide margin between the pre
